Create and use keyboard shortcuts in various applications. What are keyboard shortcuts and why do they matter? Keyboard shortcuts are keyboard shortcuts (also known as hotkeys) that you use to get work done with your computer. Typing the same keystroke several times is a waste of time and you will eventually get slower if you do that a lot. A keyboard shortcut is a single keystroke or combination of keystrokes that can be used instead of repeating a task. Keyboard shortcuts are widely used in various applications like in web browsers, email clients, office suites, games, programming languages, configuration tools, etc. If you have trouble remembering keyboard shortcuts, you can set them up to be activated by software, the operating system, or hardware. For example, if you are a programmer, you may set up the shortcuts that you use in your editor, programming language, or text editor. More than that, Windows have its own registry where you can setup shortcuts for any program. If you use Windows for daily activities, you will see thousands of shortcuts. Fully customizable Keyboard macros are fully customizable. You can set up custom shortcuts for any kind of activities that you do regularly. For example, if you regularly download a lot of files, you can define a keyboard shortcut to your web browser that will perform the same action automatically. You can also set shortcuts to your favorite applications, like your music player or your image viewer. More than that, you can define macros for various time intervals like to open your inbox, email, or your favorite web browser at specific times of the day, or to open a specific file, folder, or document. For example, a macro that you might use for work is to open your favorite web browser and go directly to your corporate page. If you are working from home you can set your browser to open your corporate page when you are at home and not at your office. You can also create macros that you only use once in a while, like when you take a new client on a meeting. You can define the same keyboard shortcut for that, so that you don't have to repeat the task over and over again. DotNetNuke Wiki Resources: Keyboard Macros DotNetNuke Wiki DotNetNuke Wiki...
